

DIEGO RUIZ ELIZONDO

State of Mexico, Mexico

druizelizondo@gmail.com | +52 55 1932 7522 | linkedin.com/in/diego-ruiz-elizondo-634b48297

August 17, 2026

Good afternoon,

I'm writing to apply for the Customer Service Representative position you're recruiting for on behalf of your logistics client.

I currently work at Boost Mobile as a Global Expert, a role I've held since July 2024. There, I handle English-language customer cases that usually arrive already complicated: accounts with a long history of activity, confusing records, more than one department involved. Part of the job is simply not letting go of a case until it's actually resolved, and coordinating with the right people to make that happen. I think that's a fairly close match to what you describe for shipment follow-up.

I studied International Relations at UNAM, with a focus on international trade and logistics, and before joining Boost Mobile I spent close to two years as a research assistant at CIALC, also at UNAM, writing and reviewing academic documents. That part of the work got me used to paying close attention to documentation, which I imagine matters just as much when you're tracking an actual shipment.

What appeals to me most about this role is the direct client contact. Honestly, that's the part of my current job I enjoy the most, and I'd like to keep building on it in a setting closer to international trade.

I'm available for an interview, and happy to talk more about the role and the company you'd be placing me with.

Best regards,

Diego Ruiz Elizondo