Hi,

I saw the Customer Service Representative role you're hiring for on behalf of your logistics client, and I'd like to apply.

I've spent a little over two years at Boost Mobile as a Global Expert, handling complex English-language customer cases — messy account histories, multiple teams involved, staying on it until the issue is actually resolved. That's pretty close to what you describe for shipment coordination: talking to different parties, keeping track of everything, and fixing things when they don't go as planned. My performance there has held between 98.9% and 108.8% to goal over the past few months.

I studied International Relations at UNAM with a focus on international trade and logistics — not by accident, it's the area I've been interested in since school. I also did research work at CIALC-UNAM, which sharpened my eye for detail and documentation, which I imagine matters a lot when you're tracking a shipment.

The client-facing side of the role is honestly what appeals to me most — it's what I enjoy most about my current job.

Happy to talk more, and I'd also be curious to learn a bit more about the company you'd be placing me with. Thanks for your time.

Best,

Diego Ruiz Elizondo
